NexaMotion Group Names UAC and Precision International Its Inaugural Vendors of the Year

New annual award recognizes the supplier partners who go beyond the transaction

CLEVELAND, November 17, 2026 – NexaMotion Group (NMG) has named UAC (Universal Air Conditioner, Inc.) and Precision International the recipients of its first annual Vendor of the Year award. The program honors supplier partners whose commitment to NMG's customers, team and strategy extends well beyond the purchase order.

For 50 years, from the founding of Transtar to the formation of NexaMotion Group, strong supplier partnerships have been a cornerstone of how the company competes. Honorees were selected by NMG's executive and supply chain leadership on availability, quality and responsiveness, and on a harder test: how far the supplier was willing to go in service of NMG's strategy and its customers' success.

"Anyone can fill an order. Our best partners help us build the business," said Scott Weinstein, President of NexaMotion Group. "UAC and Precision International show up in the planning room, not just on the loading dock. They bring us coverage before our customers ask for it, they invest in our people and our shops, and when we make bold moves as a company they are right beside us. That is partnership, and it is what this award was created to honor."

UAC

Founded in 1988 and headquartered in Mansfield, Texas, UAC designs and supplies automotive air conditioning components, from compressors and condensers to evaporators, driers, hose assemblies and electrical parts, backed by a factory audit process and an in-house validation team.

NMG recently selected UAC as the lead air conditioning supplier for its general repair business, a decision shaped as much by UAC's willingness to plan, train and invest alongside NMG's teams as by the quality of its catalog.

UAC is led by Francisco Coll, CEO, and Sophia Coll Crowley, CEO, with Luke Masters, Vice President of Business Development.

Precision International
Founded in 1975 by Dennis Marshall and based in Yaphank, New York, Precision International supplies more than 3,000 transmission kits and nearly 10,000 parts and components to rebuilders worldwide. The company is ISO 9001 certified and a five-time consecutive General Motors Supplier of the Year.

Precision International is led by Tina Parente, President, with Frank Miller, Executive Vice President, and John Sollazzo, Vice President of Sales and Marketing.

What this means for NMG customers
“Both companies share forecasts with us, solve problems before they reach a customer, and measure their success by whether our shops win the job,” said Tim Cox, EVP of Supply Chain, NexaMotion Group. “That is when a supplier relationship stops being a transaction and becomes a competitive advantage for everyone it touches.”

NMG will present the Vendor of the Year award annually. UAC and Precision International products are available through NMG’s business brands and sales representatives. Contact your NMG sales representative to learn more.
